

SOCIAL HOUSING

Looking back, moving forward;
embracing change to deliver the future
Policy Conference

Thursday | June 15th 2017 | WesterUnie | Klönneplein | Amsterdam | Netherlands

WELCOME TO THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIAL HOUSING FESTIVAL

45 events organized by 30 partners, 8 different venues in the Dutch capital, more than 168 hours dedicated to a basic human right. The first celebration of the long tradition of decent, affordable housing for all is coming on June 13th in Amsterdam. Over 9 days the International Social Housing Festival (ISHF) will illustrate through conferences, workshops, lectures, tours, presentations, exhibitions, film screenings, debates, installations, activities for children and much more the added value of social housing for sustainable communities.

WHY DO WE NEED A SOCIAL HOUSING FESTIVAL?

You don't know what you have until it's gone... This widely shared life lesson corresponds to the public, cooperative and social housing, too. Access to a decent, affordable home is the foundation of pretty much everything else. At the same time the lack of it is at the core of the urban crisis that unfolds in many metropolitan centres across Europe, widening the inequalities and generating a number of social challenges. We must keep in mind that there is no magic switch. Once decision makers take steps back concerning housing policies, it's very difficult to recover. It's very hard to start a housing system from scratch.

The International Social Housing Festival (ISHF) is a timely occasion for all of us to make noise in support of what we have in this post-truth era that reproduces stereotypes and myths around housing. We have many reasons to celebrate as well as numerous great examples to share of the work housing associations carry out on the ground changing people's lives. There's still a lot to be done, many changes we have to embrace so that we can provide the future homes. We therefore need a broad alliance of all forces to deliver this vision. Starting from the ISHF we invite you to be part of it, too!

WELCOME NOTE

by Marc Calon, Housing Europe President

Social challenges, financial and political instability, urban and architectural developments impact the foundation of people's lives, the very home they live in. Public, cooperative and social housing providers, operating as counterbalance to the market, are confronted with a number of changes they have to embrace. But far from being passive, housing associations on the ground come up with innovative solutions and pave their own way for the future...

What are the practices that are already working and can inspire? How can access to affordable housing be secured for all? What should the various stakeholders involved in housing provision keep in mind with a look into the future? What should be the objectives of housing policies? What is the role of the cities?

Are you interested in the future of housing? Be part of a dynamic debate that takes place within the International Social Housing Festival as a timely response to stereotypes and myths reproduced in our post-truth era and join a broad alliance to deliver the vision of future homes!

FOCUS ON THE CONTENT

INSPIRE: THE KEYNOTE

'Together! The New Architecture of the Collective'

Affordable housing is scarce – that much has become evident in the last few years. As real estate prices in big cities continue to skyrocket, conventional ideas of housing development prove unable to meet demands. The reaction to these challenges has been a silent revolution in contemporary architecture – towards collective building and living.

- Ilka Ruby, Berlin-based Publisher and Curator on issues surrounding Architecture and Urbanism, will deliver her keynote presentation addressing this global phenomenon by presenting a broad array of collective building and living projects from Europe, Asia, and the United States. An overview of historical precedents for the current wave of collectives demonstrates that the idea of collectivity has been a recurring theme in the history of architecture, from the reformist ideas of the nineteenth century to the hippies and squatters of the twentieth who touted the slogan make love, not lofts.

DISCUSS I: PREPARING FOR CHANGES

Our world is changing faster than the ways we provide homes. Housing providers will need to operate in a totally different ecosystem in the future. What are the major trends that will be defining their work? Mobility, demographics, increasing urbanisation and the challenge of segregation are just a few of them. Experienced representatives of a political institution that sets the international standards in a wide range of areas, a leading European university and of a civil society organisation with a long tradition help us shape the picture of the future, inviting you to add your touch to the canvas...

- Dr. Rudiger Ahrend, Head of Urban Policy Division at the OECD: 'Housing in the City: The 21st Century Challenges'
- Carina Dantas, Innovation Director in Cáritas Coimbra & Vice-President of EU Covenant on Demographic Change: 'Social housing and demography – the challenges of an ageing society'
- Dr. Wouter van Gent, Assistant Professor, Department of Geography, Planning and International Development Studies, University of Amsterdam: 'Demographics, inequality, diversity and the role of social housing'

DISCUSS II: EMBRACING CHANGES

Housing providers are way beyond just passive recipients of the changes that shape the context in which they operate. How do public, cooperative and social housing providers futureproof their operating strategies? Which are the areas in which they invest the most in technological and social innovation? Cooperatives in Italy aiming to make the most of their unique model, a Northern Irish association creating dementia friendly communities and the biggest social housing provider in the French capital that generates affordable housing solutions. With public support retreating how can social and affordable housing providers help and be helped? Get a flavour of actual best practices on the ground and share your ideas and concerns with housing association representatives from across the continent.

- John McPeake, Interim CEO, Helm Housing in N.Ireland & Housing Europe Board Member: 'From a dementia scheme to a dementia friendly community: how a Belfast-based housing association is making a difference'

- Rossana Zaccaria, President of Legacoop Abitanti, the Italian Association of Inhabitants' Co-operatives: 'Ospitalia solidale: helping youth access to housing'
- Bertrand Bret, Advisor to the Chairman & Head of International Affairs, Paris Habitat: 'An innovative policy of dialogue with tenants for a better living together'

ACT: THE UNITED CITIES OF EUROPE

Big or small, in the centre or in the periphery cities are the places where the vast majority of the global population will be living in the future. At the moment, numerous urban centres across the globe turn into "arrival cities" for those migrating, fleeing war zones or just moving away from rural areas. With their field of responsibility being the scenery for the transformation of our society, local authorities are the first ones that make the decisions defining their future. Housing is a core element.

Representatives from major European cities sit around the same table with the President of Housing Europe in an open discussion with a double objective; on the one hand to present key lessons learnt over the last few years in diverse contexts and on the other hand to identify the challenges that need to be addressed in the near future.

- Laia Ortiz, Deputy Mayor of Social Rights in Barcelona City Council
- Laurens Ivens, City of Amsterdam Alderperson responsible for Building & Housing Planning
- Dr. Elisabeth Merk, City of Munich Planning Director
- Marc Calon, President of Housing Europe

BROUGHT TO YOU BY

Housing Europe is the European Federation of Public, Cooperative & Social Housing. Since 1988 it comprises a network of 44 national & regional federations representing 43,000 housing providers in 24 countries. Together they manage over 26 million homes, about 11% of existing dwellings in Europe.

www.housingeurope.eu | @housingeurope

Aedes is the national organisation promoting the interests of practically every social housing organisation in the Netherlands, on all possible fronts. Together, Aedes members manage 2.4 million dwellings, constituting 32 percent of the total housing stock. As a network organisation, knowledge centre and think tank, Aedes provides a platform for its 299 members to meet, exchange ideas and develop visions.
